RISK FACTORS

Investing involves risk, including possible loss of principal. Investments in smaller companies typically exhibit higher volatility and lower trading volume. In addition to the normal risks associated with investing, international investments may involve risk or capital loss from unfavorable fluctuation in currency values, differences in generally accepted accounting principles or from social, economic or political instability in other nations. Emerging markets involve heightened risks related to these factors as well as increased volatility and lower trading volume. The Fund may invest in derivatives, which are often more volatile than other investments and may magnify the Fund's gains or losses. The Fund's use of futures contracts, forward contracts, purchased options, and swaps is subject to correlation, leverage, liquidity and market risk. Value and growth investment styles may increase the risks of investing in the Fund. If the Adviser's assessment of market conditions or a company's value is wrong, the Fund could suffer losses or produce poor performance relative to other funds. In addition, "value stocks" can continue to be undervalued by the market for long periods. If a growth company does not meet expectations, the price of its stock may decline significantly, even if it has increased earnings. Many growth companies do not pay dividends. Companies that do not pay dividends often have greater stock price declines during market downturns. REIT investments are subject to changes in economic conditions, credit risk and interest rate fluctuations. A large percentage of the Fund's shares are held by a small number of shareholders, including persons and entities related to the Adviser. A large redemption by one or more of these shareholders could materially increase the Fund's transaction costs, which would negatively impact the Fund's performance and could cause adverse tax consequences for the remaining shareholders of the Fund. There is no assurance that the Fund will meet its objective.
